"In this article I purpose to discuss the five-year-average agricultural surplus, which can be prevented. Periodic annual overproduction, due to climatic and other reasons beyond the control of the farmer, will occur and cannot be avoided. It is the cause of another problem which will have to be met in another way, and which is outside the scope of the present article."

American Review of Reviews

Ely, Richard T. Farm relief and flood control. (In American Review of Reviews, v.76, no.5, Nov. 1927, p.485-487)

"If we are going to help the farmer we must engage in planning, with reference to the utilization of land and with reference to the flow of population from the city to the country. We must encourage self-help, but that alone is absolutely inadequate. The hundreds of thousands of sufferers in the Mississippi Valley were powerless to avert the calamity that overtook them. The movements of population need wise direction. Individuals need enlightenment and the help of educational agencies of different kinds. Man must gain still greater control over Nature, and especially over his own associated activities. We need planning and still more planning. As Prof. J. Russell Smith of Columbus University said recently - "Plan or Perish."

"A dirt farmer" gives his views on farm aid. The following paragraph concludes the article: "'Farm Aid' and allied phrases are sacred. Their function is odd. Briefly, it is to create, aggravate, and perpetuate the evils they propose to overcome."

Breeder's Gazette

Howard, J. R. A four-legged farm relief plan. (In Breeder's Gazette, v.92, no. 28, Oct. 1927, p.9,20)

The author who was the first president of the American Farm Bureau thinks that "the farm relief which the cornbelt needs is more livestock." He also asks these questions: "Could not then a sound national agricultural policy be combined with an easily workable relief measure by granting an export bounty on livestock products sufficient to enable us to clear our surpluses, and still meet foreign competition? Or if not an export bounty, then transportation differentials or a new McNary-Haugen measure devised to accomplish the same result?"

Price, T. H. Henry Ford's solution for the agricultural problem. (In Commerce and Finance, v.16, no.6, Feb. 9, 1927, p.321-322)

An account of a talk with Henry Ford in which he is quoted as having said that the work incident to the production of any of our staple crops to which a farmer now gives a year could easily be done in twenty days or less with thorough organization and the aid of labor-saving machinery, and that he is planning to operate some experimental farms on which his theory is to be carried out. He is further quoted as having said "If we succeed in reducing the cost of agricultural production, we shall expect to share the economies effected with the public."

"There is a surplus problem in agriculture. But it is not a problem of general overproduction. We are not headed toward overproduction. It is the problem of stabilizing price levels - of preventing the violent disturbance in price and wage relationships by financial inflation and deflation or any other cause. It relates especially to the distributive system, for it is here that the farmer feels his decisive contact with the urban wage level."

"This analysis of the partial depression in farming ... points out what an important part is played by handling and distribution costs, in determining the prices paid farmers for their products. It is not primarily a matter of overproduction, says the authors, nor is there any doubt that the situation will solve itself, if given time. The trouble is that such adjustments invariably go too far, resulting in unnaturally high retail prices of farm products, and thus ultimately cause another reaction and depression."

Taylor, H. C., and Perlman, Jacob. The share of agriculture in the national income. (In Journal of Land and Public Utility Economics, v.3, no.2, May, 1927, p.145-162)

"The purpose of this article is to show the share of the total national income received by agriculture in each year from 1909 to 1925. In order to do this, it is necessary to study prices, analyze the value of farm products, and calculate the expenses and compute the net income of agriculture, which, when compared with the total 'current income' of the people of the United States, gives the share of agriculture in the national income."

"The dollar of industry is purely a domestic dollar brought about through protection in the form of the tariff, while the farmer's dollar is purely a world-price dollar. With European conditions in the shape they are, the farmer cannot expect his dollar to compete with industry, and he has found to his great sorrow that it will not."

"To solve the present agricultural problem, it must be studied from two points of view - the duty of the nation to the farmer, and the duty of the farmer to the nation. The duty of the nation to the farmer is to give him a square deal, to treat agriculture as fairly as other industries ... The duty of the farmer to the nation is to grow an adequate food supply for all groups, on an efficient and economic basis."

Taylor, C. C. The agricultural situation. (In Southern Planter, no.14, July 15, 1927, p.9; no.16, Aug. 15, 1927, p.14)

The author believes "that agriculture is going to reach the status of big business by way of cooperation instead of corporations." The reasons for his belief are: "First, because the highly standardized and stultified methods of the factory cannot be applied to farming except in a few of the great staples. Farming is husbandry. Plants and animals must be nurtured like children and no scheme of enterprise that reduces the farmer to the status of a factory hand can furnish the care and nurture which is essential to successful farming. Second, I cannot believe that the civilization of those who produce the primary wealth of the world is going to be sacrificed to factory efficiency even if it would work in farming!"
